Melissa Roeder has worked as a Speech Pathologist in the Merrick School District since 1983. She is a member of ASHA and LISHA, serving on the LISHA Executive Board in many different capacities. In 2006, Melissa was the recipient of the Mimi Katzen Memorial Award. She has been a cooperating teacher for graduate student interns from local universities for over 20 years. During the course of her career Melissa has worked cooperatively with her colleagues to develop effective early intervention and literacy programs within the general education classroom setting. Melissa has given several in-service courses on the subject of phonological awareness, as well as a course on the Lindamood Phoneme Sequencing Program (LIPS). Her creative, hands-on workshops focus on the application of practical strategies in the classroom and therapy settings. Melissa has written articles on the topic of listening skills, phonological awareness and normal speech and language development. These articles have appeared in monthly publications, on the internet, and in a parenting magazine

Loretta Vernet received her Master's Degree in Literacy Studies from Hofstra University. She has been a Kindergarten teacher at Birch School, in Merrick, since 1989. Loretta was part of the Leadership group at Columbia Teacher's College for 3 years and served as the district's Kindergarten Literacy Coach. In addition to teaching in-service classes for the Merrick School District, Loretta has provided staff development for neighboring school districts. Her expertise in the field of literacy development, along with her creativity, and ability to share her knowledge with both her students and colleagues, makes her a unique and respected member of the educational community.

Overview

This workshop will focus on giving the participants a unique view of a collaborative approach towards phonological awareness development in children. Research on the importance of phonological awareness in literacy development will be explored. Videos of lessons will be shared. Hands-on, creative materials will be developed which can be used by the SLP and/or classroom teacher with preschool through early elementary school age children in all academic settings.

Learning Objectives

Participants will:

- Identify the stages of literacy development
- Define phonological awareness and its importance to the development of literacy.
- Discuss the differences among the terms phonological awareness, phonemic awareness and phonics.
- List all of the stages of phonological awareness.
- Describe a classroom teacher's perspective of whole class implementation of phonological awareness instruction.
- Integrate grade level curriculum/expectations, with speech-language goals.
- Incorporate literature, music, books and charts as a springboard to creative p.a. lessons.
- Use the "whole body" when teaching phonemic awareness.
- Create unique, visually stimulating, yet practical, instructional materials.
